IAN: Doctor, ... We've got our clothes on.

DOCTOR: Well, I should hope so, my boy, I should hope so!

BARBARA: Doctor, our normal, every-day clothes!

(THE DOCTOR
LOOKS DOWN
AT HIMSELF,
AT THE OTHERS,
SEEMS TO FIND
IT AMUSING AND NOT IN THE LEAST DISTURBING)

DOCTOR: 'Pon my soul, yes.
(HE CHUCKLES) We had those cloaks and things on, didn't we?
Well, I must say it will save us
the bother of having to change ...
Now, let's see where we've landed.

(THE DOCTOR
TURNS TO THE CONTROLS.

THE OTHERS ARE NOT GOING TO LET HIM GET

AS THAT, MOVE

IAN: We all blacked out for a while - I remember turning, and seeing you ...

DOCTOR: (SLIGHTLY TESTY) Whatever happened, Chesterton - it's all right now.

VICKI: Then where are the clothes
we were wearing?

(TK NEXT)

-7-

DOCTOR: My dear, they're probably hanging up where they should be. If it concerns you that much I suggest you go
and have a look ...

VICKI: Well all right - I will!

(VICKI STARTS
TO MOVE OFF.

DOCTOR WHO TURNS FROM THE CONTROL PANEL, CHECKS HER)

DOCTOR: Oh, and on your way back you might fetch me a drink of water, child - I'm quite parched.

VICKI: Yes, of course.

Let VICKI go R.

(VICKI MOVES OFF)

Tighten shot.

DOCTOR: (MUTTERING) I don't know,
all this fussing just because our clothes change. Time and relativity, my boy, time and relativity! That's where the answer lies!

IAN: I dare say, but we'd be happier if you explained it.

DOCTOR: Yes, well, er - yes!
(cont ...)

(THE DOCTOR
DOESN'T KNOW
"WHY", OFFHAND,
BUT FEELS HE SHOULD DO.

HOWEVER HE IS NOT GOING TO ADMIT THIS TO

Int. Day.

VICKI moves away
from the wardrobe
door in the Tardis,
a puzzled look on her face, she shrugs, and we follow her as she moves over to a water
container.

She takes up a glass,
fills it, is about to move off when she
casts a worried glance
towards the clothes
closet.

This moment of wandering causes the glass to slip from her fingers and it shatters
on the floor. We see it in small pieces.
